The "Tageszeitung" devotes a leading article, which does not need the signature to betray its Count con Reventlew origin, to the late Eearl Kitchener's alleged statement to W. Cameron Forbes, former Governor General of the Philippines, that the Entente Allies would never he able to conquer Germany without the assistance of the United States. The paper characterizes the American policy as one in which the United States is making a threatened use of a wooden sword, and calls for a policy of the utmost firmness against the United States.

"The plan of the Entente Powers to force a decision in Dobrudja and Macedonia was frustrated as soon as it began. The Salonica army has been able to make only feeble advances. The Germans, Bulgarians and Turks in Dobrudja marched to the northward while our enemies hoped that the Russians and Rumanians would march to the southward.

Beyond deubt, the Premier continued, the problem demanded immediate solution. Not only were shipping companies refusing to accept cargoes of fruit, he said, but crews in certain ports did not wish to embark without receiving from the government formal guarantees of safety. The most intense agitation was among the exporters of fruits.
